Description

04.08 Transfer students

An individual is considered to be a transfer student at the Eastman School if they earned college level credit while matriculated (enrolled as a candidate for a degree) at an accredited university, college, or community college. Students who earn college-level credit while attending high school, or who earn college level credit that is not part of a degree program, are considered new first-year students and not transfer students.

For students with a completed degree from another two- or four-year school, a maximum of 60 credits are transferrable to a bachelor's degree at the Eastman School of Music. In these situations, students are also subject to the below transfer credit policies.
